

Jaylene Tours West

2011 Western Canadian Music Award nominee Jaylene Johnson brings her "angelic pipes" (Uptown Magazine) from Winnipeg to Vancouver Island and back this summer. The fourteen-date tour spans over a month and includes both traditional and non-traditional venues.

Says Johnson, "I really enjoy the variety in what I do. On this tour I'll play house concerts, which is a very personal way to connect with an audience. I'll also play established venues like The Ironwood in Calgary and Lorenzo's Cafe in Enderby. It's all fun for me."

If you watch television, you've probably heard her music. She has a growing international audience through placements in television shows including Pretty Little Liars and Degrassi: The Next Generation. With five records of original material to her credit, she is also an in-demand cowriter, penning tunes with artists including Amy Sky, Hannah Georgas and Sierra Noble. Recent collaborations with Chris Burke-Gaffney (Chantal Kreviazuk; Kyle Riabko), The Keats and Eagle and Hawk also landed her ECMA and Juno nominations, as well as her third nod as a finalist in the renowned International Songwriting Competition.

For Johnson, playing live is all about connecting with the crowd through audience participation, humour and storytelling.

"I've been told I'm a warm and engaging performer, which I consider a great compliment" says Jaylene, "It's more than just listening to me playing songs. It's about sharing from the heart and taking people on a unique journey with every show."

The "journey" is something she considers a privilege. A car accident on the TransCanada Highway at the end of her touring year in 2004 left her out of commission for over a year. The years following allowed her to develop her craft as a songwriter, working with Casablanca Media Publishing for two years and collaborating all over North America. Now she's eager to be back on the road with a varied body of work.

"I'm just happy whenever I can share my music with people. I don't take it for granted."
